This publication describes a domestic intercultural immersion project that was piloted on an Ojibwe reservation in northern Wisconsin. Designed as a clinical experience for nursing graduate students, it was developed by the author with Family Nurse Practitioner Dana Irmick, of the Peter Christensen Health Center in Lac du Flambeau. This immersion sought to instill confidence in our graduates by experiencing new situations with increased curiosity, empathy, and wisdom.