Grant Proposals: Planning a Fundable Design

You’ve identified a sponsor that holds great potential for funding your project. Now it’s time to make your grant proposal distinctively different from the competition.

Planning a fundable design includes not only describing what you want to do but also how you will define and measure success. In addition to learning project planning tips that you can incorporate into your next grant proposal, you will see actual reviewer comments from successful and unsuccessful applications.

Monday, August 30, 2010
3:00 - 4:00 p.m.
CETL (Old Library 1142)