During the summer of 2010, Dr. Jerry Worley and photographer Anders Andersson traveled to five tribal colleges in Montana at the request of Tribal College Journal. Worley and Andersson were assigned a 3,000-word feature to discover “what the presidents of these colleges were most proud of.” During a two-week period, they travelled to Little Big Horn College, Chief Dull Knife College, Stone Child College, Aaniiih Nakoda College, and Fort Peck Community College. Please join us as we take a broad and detailed glance at what is happening in American Indian higher education in Big Sky Country.
