Students enrolled in the UW-Eau Claire U.S.-China 1+2+1 Joint Academic Program — facilitated through the China Center for International Educational Exchange and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities in collaboration with UW-Eau Claire — will spend their freshman year at a Chinese university, their sophomore and junior years at UW-Eau Claire, and their senior year back at their original university in China. Upon completing all requirements, students receive baccalaureate degrees from each school.

UW-Eau Claire is offering six majors to China 1+2+1 students for the 2008-09 academic year. Additional programs are being considered. For details about these programs and the wide range of majors and minors at UW-Eau Claire, go to www.uwec.edu/admissions/Facts.htm.

Chemistry
Chemistry majors at UW-Eau Claire focus their studies on environmental protection, industrial research, product development, licensure, chemistry teaching, chemical sales and marketing. If you major in chemistry, you’ll work on challenging research projects and have access to state-of-the-art equipment. The skills you learn as a chemistry major will be applicable to fields ranging from pharmaceuticals to biotechnology.

Mathematics
Mathematics majors study exactly what you’d expect — lots and lots of math. Our students choose an emphasis in liberal arts, applied mathematics, statistics or actuarial work. UW-Eau Claire mathematics graduates have gone on to become actuaries, economists, professors and business leaders.

Physics
If you major in physics, you’ll study a remarkably broad range of natural phenomena. You’ll carry out and read about experiments and have opportunities to collaborate with faculty on physics, materials science, astronomy or computational science research. Our physics graduates often continue on to graduate school or begin careers in science, engineering or education.

Kinesiology
The kinesiology major, with its combination of physiology and health science, will help prepare you to make the world a healthier and safer place. If you major in kinesiology at UW-Eau Claire, you’ll be able to choose from four emphasis areas: human performance, movement studies, physical education training or sport pedagogy.

Information Systems
The information systems major is for you if you’re interested in how people use computers to improve the performance of individuals and organizations. Students in this comprehensive major focus on business analysis, systems development or enterprise networking. The IS major provides knowledge required to enter a career as a systems analyst, application developer, manager of information technology or a network manager.

Computer Science
If you major in computer science, you’ll focus on how computer technology can be applied to all fields of business, learn how to develop business applications and perform systems analysis and study the process of developing software. Problem solving is a major part of computer science, and graduates pursue careers in fields including business, management, and computer support.
