Home and Homing as Resistance: Survival of LGBTQ Latinx Migrants

Women's Studies Quarterly

The article, “Home and Homing as Resistance: Survival of LGBTQ Latinx Migrants,” is part of a special issue on protest from Women's Studies Quarterly, a feminist interdisciplinary peer-reviewed journal. It is coming out in October, 2018 as part of the fall/winter issue. Editors describe this issue as one where “contributors reflect on the histories, presents, and futures of protest through a feminist lens.” “Home and Homing as Resistance” specifically looks at the concept of home and homing in the lives of LGBTQ migrants and the ways in which homing can be a form of protest.
