"Confronting Idea Stealers in the Workplace: The Unfortunate Moral Credentialing Granted to Power Holders."

Nicole Ploeger-Lyons
Business Communication
College of Business

Wednesday
October 27, 2021
12:10 - 12:50 p.m.
CETL (OL 1142)

The focus of this research presentation is to explore experimental data about how and when employees confront one another for stealing their ideas. Moral licensing theory is the theoretical lens used to explain workers' responses to an unethical actor who presented the worker's ideas as the unethical actor's own.