Three articles summarize scholarship and service activities. Jewett et al. was co-authored by UW-Eau Claire undergraduates and colleagues from the Universities of Minnesota and Waikato, New Zealand. We found that opioids neither induce nor alter hunger responses in subjects trained to recognize and discriminate between “hungry” and “not hungry” conditions. In Womack et al., we discuss the effectiveness of a diversity and career mentoring network for pharmacology graduate and post-doctoral scholars from underrepresented groups. I was the only mentor from a primarily undergraduate institution. The FUN newsletter article summarizes the use of Zoom to enhance faculty interactions during the COVID pandemic, and support teaching, scholarship, service, and well-being.
