Introductory paragraph for catalog:

The B.F.A. degree is designed for students interested in pursuing graduate studies (e.g., Masters of Fine Arts programs) or professional careers in the visual arts. The Integrative Visual Arts Comprehensive Major provides the most integrated and immersive studio experience with advanced levels of artistic exploration, experience, and focus. This major encourages students with specific interests, (e.g., in such fields as graphic design, illustration, photography, ceramics, etc.) to expand traditional boundaries and engage a variety of media and their entanglements.

Majors will also be encouraged to consider how a thematic selection of integrated electives can enhance their educational experience as they pursue their professional aspirations while taking creative risks that help them grow as artists. Following are just a few examples of how some of a student's integrated electives in studio or art history can be selected and organized with intention and diversity:

• Theme: Form and Space; Example courses: Intermediate Sculpture, Intermediate Ceramics, Painting–Space and Process, History of Photography, Advanced Studio Practice
• Theme: Sequential Expression; Example courses: Illustration Narratives, Video for Artists, Visual Communications, Digital Painting, Artists Books
• Theme: Communication in Contemporary Culture; Example courses: Visual Communications, Intermediate Photography, Illustration Editorials, UX Design, History of Graphic Design, Advanced Studio Practice

Summary and Rationale

Target Audience(s)

All students interested in Art and Design who intend to go on to graduate school programs (e.g., M.F.A.) or who wish to become professional or practicing artists.

Evidence of long-term need

In an effort to graduate art students with 21st century skills who are prepared to contribute to a global creative economy within four years’ time, the Department of Art & Design proposes to replace the six current B.F.A. major emphases (ceramics, drawing & painting, graphic design, illustration, photography, and sculpture) with a single major emphasis under the B.F.A. degree that is more holistic in its visual art learning experiences. The Integrative Visual Arts Comprehensive Major will allow more media exploration and entanglements and will not lock students into specific sequences or support options required within each emphasis. A broad studio experience is consistent with current developments in art and design. Many graduate programs do not designate (sub)disciplines in the way our current B.F.A. major emphases do. Students will have greater opportunity for deeper exploration of theses or capstone work, integration of applied high impact practices (internships, community collaborations, apprenticeships), more inter-departmental collaborations and inter-media synergies, and more exposure to ideas and concepts generated in courses and disciplines outside of the department which they can bring into the studio and their work. In this way, students will build a solid and broad art foundation which better prepares them for careers and activities beyond graduation.

Anticipated Enrollment

The six current BFA major emphases have a combined total of 68 students (Data Warehouse, 19 Sept 2022). We anticipate that the new Integrative Visual Arts Comprehensive Major will attract as many as 80-90 students due to its holistic approach, the increased flexibility that comes from the ability to draw from a wider array of studio electives, the reduced number of credits that builds greater opportunity to take liberal education and other classes from across the university, and the ease of transferring into the major from other schools, departments, and programs.

Alignment with university mission

Art & Design plays a critical role in the UWEC’s transformative liberal education, not only for Art & Design majors, but for all students on campus. The Integrative Visual Arts Comprehensive Major acknowledges the diverse backgrounds and aspirations of our students. It strengthens and distinguishes our program and expands the framework in which students can “develop their intellectual, personal, cultural, and social competencies.” This new major emphasis encourages students to recognize and develop their skills and perspectives as artists by stepping outside of traditional and conventional pathways. At the same time, students who wish to focus in specific areas or media will continue to have the opportunity to do so, but with the encouragement and opportunity to enhance that focus and expand its creative boundaries. Even as the Integrative Visual Arts Comprehensive Major increases the flexibility it provides students to pursue their degree, it increases the intentionality with which we prepare our students for life and livelihood in a dynamic and diverse world.

The Integrative Visual Arts Comprehensive Major also has important pragmatic benefits consistent with university priorities. Critically, it will reduce time to graduation for our B.F.A. students. It is a 69-credit major, in contrast to the 75 credits required of each of the current B.F.A. major emphases. The proposed major emphasis gives credit to students for activities currently required for no credit, namely, the 1-credit B.F.A. Review Preparation and the 2-credit B.F.A. Senior Exhibition (to be proposed concurrent with this program change). Supporting this effort to reduce time to graduation, the department is also in the process of adding elective and required courses into the Liberal Education Core. A new elective course, ART 303: Art Therapy, was just approved as S3 and I1. The existing elective of ARTH 324: Survey of North American Art is being proposed as a K4 and R1. The required course, ART 402: Advanced Studio Practice, is being proposed for I1.

Statement of benefits to students

In addition to the academic, artistic, and professional benefits of a more holistic and integrative program, a single Integrative Visual Arts B.F.A. major emphasis greatly increases student flexibility, simplifies navigation of degree requirements, and increases opportunities for advising mentorship and consequently, planning and intentionality.

- Students will no longer be locked into a sequence of courses but can choose a broad studio experience, a focused one, or one crafted to meet the needs of students with unique interests (e.g., medical illustration);
- Because of the array of courses fulfilling requirements and a structure which ensures prerequisites are met, students desiring to shift directions or switch from the B.A./B.S. Studio or Graphic Communications Comprehensive Majors will find more of their credits applicable to the new major;
- With fewer required credits and credit for previously non-credited requirements (B.F.A. review preparation and senior exhibition), students with interest in a second program will have increased possibility of pursuing it if desired;
- While travel experiences will continue to be offered and promoted, the current travel requirement will not be included in the new major emphasis, providing additional flexibility for students. The Covid era (during which the travel requirement was suspended) has shown that maintaining this requirement can be burdensome for many students;
- Students will always have studio classes and electives that contribute to their major and the department can more confidently rotate courses, support sabbaticals, and even introduce new classes. Students will encounter more opportunities for discovery as they fulfill their major requirements outside the constraints of disciplinary tracks;
- Advising and mentoring will be improved. Faculty often advise B.F.A. students within the faculty's area of expertise, even when those students might have taken an interest in art-making outside of that narrow discipline. The proposed major emphasis allows students to pursue those discoveries while opening the opportunity for all faculty to advise and mentor all students in the single, integrative major. This increases the opportunity for inter-departmental collaborations and creates more flexibility in mentoring BFA students as they grow, evolve, develop new interests, and seek guidance in their graduation semester or year;
- Reducing the credit requirements and expanding the options for meeting them will provide a better mix of lecture versus studio time, reduce the number of students loading on credits to graduate, and allow students more time crafting the work for their BFA senior exhibit. The sample degree plan will be structured to provide openings in their 4th-year schedule that are not filled with any university or major requirements.

Resources

Does the department have the necessary staffing to offer this program?

Yes

Explain need for student support, library resources, etc.:

No additional student support above what currently exists will be needed.

Describe funding needs to initiate and maintain the program, including source(s) of funding and any needed resource reallocation:

No additional funding is needed.
Proposed frequency of offering for courses included in the program:
Foundation courses taught every semester; Core Visual Arts Courses taught every academic year; multiple integrated visual arts courses taught every semester; required Professional Practice courses (ART 2XX, ART 4XX, ART 402) taught every semester and 2-3 of the remaining "choice" courses taught every semester.

Proposed arrangements for ongoing faculty advising for students in the program
Same as currently practiced for serving existing B.F.A. students. All faculty will advise B.F.A. students.

Provide justification that this program is not a duplication of another program that is currently being offered
The Integrative Visual Arts B.F.A. major emphasis integrates and consolidates the currently existing B.F.A. major emphases. We will now have one major program rather than six. The existing six will be suspended.
