Supporting Blugolds through their journey

Welcome from Billy Felz, vice chancellor for enrollment management

Welcome Blugold families to our vibrant community at UW-Eau Claire! As vice chancellor for enrollment management, it's my pleasure to extend a warm greeting to you all as we kick off the 2026-27 academic year.

Here at UW-Eau Claire, we place student success at the forefront of all that we do. Our faculty and staff work hard to ensure your students have the support they need. For example, we have a dedicated team that meets weekly to dive into data, ensuring we're proactive in offering the right assistance at the right time. Our Counseling Services staff stand ready to provide personalized care and our engaged faculty members are committed to guiding, inspiring and supporting each student throughout their journey.

As part of our family, your support is invaluable. Together, let's continue to foster an environment where every student feels empowered to reach their fullest potential.

If you ever need anything or have concerns or questions, reach out to our team at enrollmentmanagement@uwec.edu. We are always happy to help.

UW-Eau Claire: An authentic and supportive community

Encouraging connection among your students;
Gregg Heinselman, vice chancellor for student affairs

Greetings, Blugold families, and welcome to UW-Eau Claire. As vice chancellor for student affairs, I have the distinct honor of supporting your young adults as they navigate one of the most formative chapters of their lives.

I've spent most of my career in higher education and I'll be the first to say: Things look different now than when I started. Today's students have grown up in a world shaped by social media and constant connectivity. That's changed the way young people build relationships and it makes the work of intentional community-building even more important.

I believe that there is a community for every student at UW-Eau Claire, but it takes some initiative and willpower on the part of your student to engage.

At UW-Eau Claire, we believe that engagement is a precondition of growth and learning.

Instead of waiting to be approached, encourage your student to be the one who pulls their peers in. Research shows that engaged students are more satisfied and more successful in their college experience. The things we do halfheartedly leave no mark on us. The things that inspire deep participation are the ones that expand and transform you.

At UW-Eau Claire, the amazing faculty, staff and yes — current students — work tirelessly to provide first-year and transfer students with opportunities to get involved and build meaningful relationships. Join us in encouraging your students to spend their time at UW-Eau Claire with a passion for connection and a commitment to building community.

After all, we're all Blugolds at the end of the day. You might as well get to know one another.

Help your Blugold succeed:

The first couple weeks of college are a time of transition. For new, first-year students — they might be experiencing a wave of excitement. Blugold Welcome fills their September with activities (many of which are included in this month's dates) and on top of that — students are getting used to their classes and learning how to manage the "freedom" college brings.

But, don't be surprised if you get a call from your student telling you that they're struggling to acclimate or fit in. This is completely normal, especially in the first semester. Reassure them that they're not alone and encourage them to try some things that get them out of their comfort zone.

UW-Eau Claire has over 200 student organizations on campus! Student orgs are a great way for students to make friends and get involved!

For some students, the magic of the first month might be fading. Now is a great time to help students celebrate their early achievements and reflect on initial challenges, too. Remind your student that every assignment turned in, every paragraph of a paper written and yes, every class session attended is an accomplishment! We believe every student who enrolls at UW-Eau Claire has what it takes to be successful, and are confident that your encouraging words can help keep your student focused, energized and committed to their goals.

Help your Blugold succeed:

It's registration season! Your student will need to ensure they've completed a few tasks in order to register. Students should check and clear their holds in CampS, meet with their ARCC advisor and know their enrollment appointment time. Enrollment times are based on credits completed, so will vary by student. It is very important that students register right when they are able. Doing so will give them the best chance of securing the classes they want to enroll in. If students have questions, they should contact the Advising, Retention and Career Center and be on the lookout for the drop-in registration lab hours (offered in late November). uwec.ly/arcc

Did you know?

Often, a 'W' is better than an 'F' on a transcript. If you hear from your student that they're concerned about their performance in a class, they might want to consider withdrawing before the withdrawal deadline. They should speak to their instructor and ARCC advisor before doing so.

Your student has made it through most of the fall semester and now, a big milestone awaits — finals week! Finals can be stressful, but there are a lot of ways to support and help see them through all the hard work they've put into this point. Encourage your student to push through and check in on them — offering encouragement along the way. Reassure them that they can do this and remind them that they'll be rewarded with a nice break at the end of it all!

Did you know?

UW-Eau Claire has a final exam policy that allows students to reschedule an exam if they have three or more on a single day. This can help keep students from having a single day where they're overloaded.

Help your Blugold succeed:

Your student just finished a busy fall semester! You might notice that they are struggling to adjust from the stress of finals — give it a few days and they'll start to fully recover (and maybe even catch up on some sleep sacrificed to studying). We do encourage families (after giving a few days to let them decompress) to discuss the fall semester with their student! Ask what went well and where they might have struggled. Learn about anything that really surprised them, or the connections they made along the way. And get excited with them about their spring plans and encourage them to remain in touch with those new friends from the fall semester!

Did you know?

Your student can revise their schedule between now and the start of the spring semester! If this is something your student is interested in, they should contact their ARCC advisor. We're open during break!

Sometimes, adjusting back to the swing of it all can be odd! Your student may notice some shifts or changes. Maybe the connections they made during the fall semester aren't as strong because they don't have a class with a friend they made, or perhaps they're realizing early on that one of their classes is going to really be a challenge for them.

One way to encourage some consistency is through a part-time, on-campus job. We know that students who work on campus in their first year earn a GPA about .3 points higher than those who don't. That's the difference between earning a 2.7 and a 3.0 (plus, the money helps, too!). Encourage your student to check out Handshake to find an on-campus job!

Registration for fall 2027 will start at the end of this month and continue into April. Now is an important time for students to check in with their academic advisor, faculty advisor and to double check that there are no holds on their account. We can't stress enough how important it is that students are prepared to register right when their appointment window opens.

By being ready to register when they can, students will have the best chance of getting the classes they want. Reach out to your student this month to plant the seed about fall 2027 registration!

April can be a long month for students. After having a nice break in March, students really have to hunker down throughout April. While finals in May might seem like a ways off, they're really only a few weeks away. Now is the time to encourage students to put the time and energy into creating study plans for their classes. By starting that prep work now, students can avoid cramming for finals. Reach out to your student this month to check in: do they know what their finals will look like? Have they started outlining some of their classes? Should they be seeking any additional academic support through tutoring or faculty-student (office) hours?

With the school year coming to a close and finals rapidly approaching, your student is likely feeling several emotions. Excitement about finishing their first year, nervousness about their courses, or maybe disappointment about having to leave newly formed friends over the summer. We know that managing those emotions and staying focused on the task at hand can be a challenge — and we encourage students to utilize resources on campus to help them navigate that. Counseling services offers free short-term counseling, along with crisis counseling and the Blugold Learning Center (formerly known as the Academic Skills Center) can help students learn important study skills. If you sense your student may be struggling as they wrap up the year, encourage them to reach out to utilize one of the many support services UW-Eau Claire offers.

Did you know that over one third of undergraduate students change their major at least once before earning their degree? It's very common for students to change their major as they explore college and find new interests. academic advisors in the ARCC are able to help students through this process. Advisors can help students change their major or minor, or run through exploratory exercises to determine a good major to explore. Students can schedule an appointment with their advisor through the Navigate app.

Once students have declared a major, their academic department will assign them a faculty advisor. Faculty advisors are available to provide students with expert information on decisions that will impact their future academic and professional goals. Students are able to turn to them when they have questions about major courses, internship and Community Engaged Learning opportunities, networking connections and additional opportunities in their field. In addition to their faculty advisor, students can reach out to Career Services. Career counselors are happy to help students identify internship opportunities in their chosen field, update application materials, or prepare for interviews. Meeting with a faculty advisor or a career counselor is a great first step in identifying opportunities in their chosen field!
